

SHARK IN A TAXICAB EXCITES PARK ROW

Franklin Statue Ichthyologists Debate Species of Stuffed Sea Tiger.

FISH EXPERTS WRANGLE

Blue Nose or White Belly? Who Could Tell When It Was Painted?

Ichthyologists who gossip around the Franklin statue in Printing House Square every afternoon had a rare chance for disputation and display of learning yesterday. A taxicab wherein reposed a stuffed shark drove into the midst and stayed there until a policeman ruled that even a shark out for a tag ride could not be permitted to stop the ordinary traffic of Nassau street and Park Row.

Some said it was a blue nose shark, others a white belly. This matter could be settled offhand, at the taxicab, by the expert who mounted the specimen, but he had given it a coat of blue paint from nose to tail. One expert insisted it was only a horse mackerel, but he was laughed down. A lame man who stood beside the taxicab handing out cards confided to a reporter for this paper that he had been told by a fish dealer that he had seen a shark of this kind in the water, but that it was a shark and was caught a few days ago off Fort Jefferson, L. I.

Fish Had Shark Six Inches

After the policeman had called the taxicab down Spruce street the proprietor of the fish came out of a nearby cafe and told his assistant, the lame man, that the shark was a blue nose shark. Cornelius Quinn, a boatman from Clifton Point, caught it off Sheepshead Bay.

The proprietor, F. Kopper, whipped out a six inch ruler and measuring his shark's mouth he found it was six inches long, which seemed to be true. He stated regretfully that it was 7 feet at the moment of its demise, but had shrunk in the process of mounting.

A sunburned man squinted into the fish and remarked: "That ain't no shark. I seen many a shark and its mouth is too far furled. A shark's mouth is so far back he has to turn upside down to bite. This here fish could bite you without turning over."

The lame man snorted.

"Take a look at its teeth," said he. "Double rows. That makes it a shark, don't it, my friend? But we ain't here for sympathy. You won't matter what you say. I'm sorry all the prizes have been given out."

But the septic refused to look and went away, muttering:

Stranger Finds "Aquarium"

Another man, whose walk was unsteady, held on to the taxicab while he surveyed the contents. "Is that really a shark?" he demanded. "It is," said F. Kopper. "A man eater?" "Sure!" "Dead or alive?" "Alive," replied F. Kopper. "This is the aquarium!" "Thank God," said the teetering stranger. "Been walking 'round 'n' round 'Quinn all afternoon 'n' no door to go in. Good night!"

Executive's Acts Compared With Those of Warren Hastings and Burgoyne.

NEWARK, Aug. 26.—If a woman marries a man for his property, and gets a deed to it in return for a marriage certificate, she has given a valid return for the property and it cannot be taken away from her in settlement of any claim against her husband as executor.

This was the opinion given today by Vice-Chancellor Stevens in Chancery Court when the American Surety Company tried to collect a judgment awarded against the estate of James Conway, based in part on property owned by Conway during his life, but since bequeathed to Mrs. Wilson Conway because she married the decedent's son.

James Conway contracted to build a sewer for the town of Wakened, Mass., in 1901, and took out an indemnity bond with the surety company. The subcontractors defaulted, the town recovered $45,439.11 from the company, and the company obtained judgment for $45,439.11 from Conway, but Conway had died in the meantime.

While this was going on his son, William Conway, fell in love with Miss Isabella McMorath, a Brooklyn dressmaker. He proposed to her in November, 1911, and she accepted him. He proposed again in January, 1912, and was turned down. In the following June he was turned down again. He was then turned down a third time. He was then turned down a fourth time.
